IN HONOR OF her son, fallen Pontiac Police patrol officer Casey Kohlmeier and his canine partner, Draco, Keri Jo Schmdit has established the Casey Kohlmeier Memorial Foundation to spread awareness to the impact of drunk driving and to encourage people of all ages to follow her son's lead to achieve their dreams.

Casey's story

BY ANN GILL

Casey Kohlmeier aspired to a life in law enforcement, an objective achieved the day he was hired as a patrol officer with the Pontiac Police Department.

As his mother recalls, Kohlmeier had bigger career plans and was on track to join the Federal Bureau of Învestigation (FBI) as a special agent.

"From a small age, he knew he wanted to be a police officer and then go to the FBI, I knew he could do it, he had that drive," Keri Jo Schmidt said of her oldest child.

Not long after receiving a conditional offer from the FBI, Kohlmeier's dream was shattered in seconds. Leading up to that point, Kohlmeier did everything he could to ensure that his career goals were met. After graduating from Pontiac High School he enlisted in the U.S. Air Force, earning honor grad status during basic training. He went on to technical school, again earning accolades for his work and was honored as Airman of the Even with all of his success in the military, Schmidt said her "couldn't wait to come home and be a police man."

Following his discharge from the Force, Kohlmeier returned to Pontiac and the next year he was sworn in as the city's newest police officer.

Kohlmeier took on the added responsibility of being a canine officer. Schmidt reports that the officer and his canine partner, Draco, did a number of demonstrations and participated in the county's drug policy program.

The officer was well known in the city of Pontiac and respected for his work in the community.

"His goal was to make everyone happy and safe. He did everything right and was trying to make the world a better place. Most of the criminals even liked him,"

Kohlmeier's watch over the community ended in the late hours of Oct. 30, 2013. The officer and his canine partner were working the street when a call came in reporting a reckless driver on Interstate 55. The two

A short time later, Livingston County dispatch was notified that a Pontiac Police squad car had been struck on the interstate. Attempts to reach the officer went unanswered.

Witnesses reported a southbound pickup truck crossed the median and slammed into passenger side of the officer's sport utility vehicle, pushing it into a ditch. Schmidt reports the ruts in the grass are still evident.

"At 10:17 p.m., I got a phone call that no mom wants to hear," Schmidt said of the notification that her son had been in crash and was en route to the hospital. When she arrived a long line of police officers were already in the

Unable to see her son, Schmidt walked the hospital hallways. At 10:42 p.m. she was informed that despite every attempt, her 29-year-old son had died. "He was my world, my days revolved around him," she said, recalling how she fell to the floor having heard the doctor's words.

She would later learn the driver of the pickup truck had spent the previous five hours drinking in a Bloomington bar. He was arrested and charged in the death of her son.

"I never thought I'd feel that (pain) and no mother should feel that," Šchmidt said.

In honor of her son and with the goal of putting an end to impaired driving, Schmidt established the Casey and their parents Glen and Beth Hill have a few more months of waiting ahead of them, but last week's groundbreaking marked a new beginning for the family selected by Grundy-Three Rivers Habitat for Humanity to become the owners of the organization's 13th project home.

"This is a really special groundbreaking for us, it's our first time in Coal City and we are really excited to be working with this community," said Wilkinson, president of Grundy-Three Rivers Habitat for Humanity's board of directors.

GRUNDY-THREE RIVERS Habitat for Humanity broke ground for its 13th project house and first in Coal City on Thursday, May 4. The Hill Family — Samantha, Robert, Beth and Glen — will assume ownership of the home upon its completion. The Hill's new home is being built by volunteers at 655 E. Fourth St. and is expected to be completed in the fall.

Wilkinson commended the village for its willingness to work with the organization. Town officials agreed to waive a portion of the customary building fees and approved a variance to allow the selected home plan to be constructed on the site.

"Matt Fritz (Coal City village administrator) has been a driving force behind this, he's been wanting us in Coal City," Wilkinson said.

She further commended local attorney Larry Wharrie for his pro bono work on the legal side of the project, as well as residents Larry and Sue Tarman who sold the property to the organization for $5,000.

"A steal of a deal," Wilkinson noted.

Coaler musicians taking a California trip

BY ANN GILL

Coal City High School's music department is heading to the West Coast next summer on a four-day performance tour.

This is the first time the biennial music trip is venturing west, specifically, Los Angeles, CA. In the past student musicians have traveled to Florida, Louisiana, Tennessee and New York, they've even crossed the border into Canada and taken a cruise to the Bahamas

Another first for the trip is the students will be flying to their destination. Previously transportation was by motor coach, but it was decided that a 30-plus hour road trip wasn't the best option for the planned tour. The tour scheduled for June 18 to 21, 2018, was approved by the Unit 1 Board of Education at its meeting on May 3.

Bonnie McDowell, the school's vocal music director, informed the board that after considering several locations the Los Angeles trip was the best proposal to bring before the board as it provided performance and educational opportunities, and would be an enriching trip for the students.

The trip is being organized by McDowell and Cameron Kotovsky, the school's director

Based on a tentative itinerary, participants will fly from Chicago to Los Angeles on a Monday. Upon arrival the group is scheduled to take a Hollywood behind-the-scenes tour and visit TCL Chinese Theater, also known as Grauman's Chinese Theater located on Hollywood Boulevard. The day also includes viewing the more than 2,600 stars on the Hollywood Walk of Fame and if the group chooses, a bit of shopping.

The second day of the tour is slated to begin with a VIP tour of Warner Brothers Studio in Burbank. The group will view film and television sets, as well the studio's backlot and have an opportunity to see original props, costumes and vehicles used in film

At the conclusion of the tour, the group will head to the historic Santa Monica Pier for an afternoon of siteseeing. That evening the group will either attend a Broadway show or take in a concert at the Walt Disney Performance Hall, home to the Los Angeles

Day three has yet to be finalized, but it will either include a day at Universal Studios Hollywood or Disneyland California. Both locations offer the students an opportunity to perform for the theme park's guests.

On the fourth and final day, the student musicians will attend clinics at California State University. The day also includes a visit to the Hollywood Bowl, a outdoor concert venue that has been in operation since 1922. And, before heading to the airport to fly home, the students will perform at a currently undecided venue.

McDowell noted that a number of details about the trip should be finalized in the coming months.

The estimated cost per traveler is $1,399 to $1,599 and includes travel, lodging, select meals, admission to the various attractions, tour director and evening security. McDowell said the final cost of the trip will be based on the number of participants.

Since the school does not fund the trip, the cost to participate is on the students. As in the past, McDowell said a number of fundraisers are scheduled to help the students cover the cost.

Board president Ken P. Miller said he wants to be sure that any student who would like to participate has the ability to, no matter their financial situation.

The trip is open to all students involved in the school's music department during the 2017-2018 school year. Further details on the trip will be presented to the students and their families in the near future.

As pet owners, it's our responsibility to show our pets the same level of love and compassion that they show us. But caring for our pets requires teamwork. Partnering with a qualified veterinarian is essential to ensure your furry friend lives a happy and healthy life.

This National Pet Week (scheduled to take place between May 7 and 13 across the United States), the Auxiliary to the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMAAUX) aims to raise awareness about responsible pet ownership and the importance of finding a veterinarian you can trust with all your pets' medical needs. Here's what to consider:

- 1.Office hours and operations. Are the hours of operation compatible with your work schedule and lifestyle? Does the clinic offer online services for appointment scheduling and/or health inquiries? A veterinarian that accommodates your busy schedule is committed to putting your pet's well-being first.
- 2.Range of medical services. Does the clinic offer a wide range of services, including preventive care (vaccination, deworming, etc.), surgical procedures, non-medical services (boarding, grooming, training, etc.) and geriatric care for older animals? If not, can they refer you to a network of reputable specia-

- Emergency care. If your pet experiences an acute health issue in the middle of the night, you'll want the reassurance of knowing you can seek immediate care. Ask about after-hours emergency services to ensure round-the-clock peace of mind.
- 4.Staff. Is the staff friendly, experienced and committed to providing the highest quality of care for your pet in a comfortable and stress-free environment? Are the doctors members of a professional veterinary association such as the AVMA? Lastly, if you have an exotic or non-traditional pet, are there specialists on site who can see to their needs?

You can help your veterinarian make a lifesaving diagnosis by doing your part as a responsible pet owner. Pay attention to early signs of illness such as physical abnormalities and changes in your pet's energy levels, water and food intake, or behavior.

Schnauzer helps heal old wounds for teenager

BY MARNEY SIMON STAFF WRITER

I've long been out-numbered as the only girl in a family of boys.

Over the past weekend, the family dynamic changed to put me even more in the minority, if that is possible.

Yes, there's another male in the house. A 5-Standard . Schnauzer named Kona.

Kona is an Ohio native, and he had to be rehomed after his original pet parents divorced. Jenny, a friend of mine from a suburb just outside Cleveland, and her ex-husband Corey tried very hard to make accommodations for Kona in their new separate homes, but things just weren't working out as well for him as they hoped.

As it happens, my children were trying to convince me to get a dog. It seemed like a good option to take on Kona, a house-trained dog well past the puppy years, rather than try to figure out the pet adoption process and train a dog when none of us know how. Kona was very well cared for, Jenny took him for his latest vet appointment and to get groomed before the transfer – we met in Indiana - and he came with more equipment than either of my children seem to currently own. Kona has two beds. I don't have two beds. This story isn't notable because we took in a dog. It's notable because my oldest son, Hank, who turns 15 next week, at one time had a deep fear of all things canine.

Seven years ago, just a few days after Hank's 8th birthday, he and the children from next door were playing outside. As he was cleaning up to come inside, Hank realized one of the kids had left her flip flops in our yard. He scooped them up and walked toward their front door, when he was spotted by their 80-pound German Shepherd, Max. Max had always been aggressive toward all of us, from the time we moved in next KONA IS THE NEWEST member of staff writer Marney Simon's family. He was rehomed from a friend in Ohio, and is the first pet the family has ever owned.

Seeing Hank head to the house, Max, who was inside, charged the door, broke though the screen, and bolted after Hank.

Hank turned to run, but only got a few feet before Max got a hold of him and clamped down hard. He ripped a small gash into Hank's back, and left a puncture wound in his bottom. In what I can only describe as a textbook case of fight or flight, with no more option to flee, Hank - just 8 years old, mind you - turned landed a punch square on Max's nose. It stunned the dog enough to let go, and Hank scrambled into the house just as Max's owner finally got a hold of his collar.

At the ER, they declined to stitch his gash, telling us that they don't use sutures on animal bites because it can inadvertently seal in bacteria. But, the doctor told me, a cut that size would generally need around 10 to 15 stitches to close. Hank also had the puncture in his buttock, as well as scratches and bruises. To their credit, Max's owners were apologetic and tried trainers and possible rehoming of Max, who got even more aggressive after the attack, barking at our cars and making us feel unsafe in the yard.

At one point, Max even jumped my fence. He later bit one of his owner's own children, and was euthanized.

Living next to an aggressive dog that attacked one of your chilthat dren is not easy. It was harder on Hank, who could, from that point on, be scared by even the tamest of wiener dogs. He had a difficult time at his school the day the local police did a K-9 presentation, especially since their police dog was a German Shepherd.

It didn't ever occur to me that he'd ever stop being frightened of dogs. But something changed, slowly, over the past few Hank has had a little more exposure to dogs, namely my husband's mother's small dogs, and sister's Golden Retriever.

Hank said it took a lot of time to be comfortable around dogs, even small ones. He avoided them as much as possible and would back away from fences if a dog was in a yard or even step out of the way if someone was walking their dog on a leash. But slowly, he started warming up to them.

"I just started to realize that all dogs weren't as mean as Max was," Hank

It's not a done deal. Kona is only 45 pounds. He's energetic and may nip at you during play, but he's hardly a threatening dog. Hank is still apprehensive around larger dogs. He can still be frightened by a sudden bark.

But overcoming his fear enough to bring a dog into the family was a big deal for all of us. We're also working with a trainer because we simply aren't that experienced with dogs, and we don't want to get it wrong or end up as the pet owners with "that"

Welcome to the family, Kona, the wonder dog that is teaching my son not to fear dogs.

Keep America clean

BRAIDWOOD—Why do people pitch trash out their car window? Lazy and stupid is all I can come up with. Where's your pride? Someone saw a man on Rt. 129 drag his tree trimmings across the road and dump a very large pile on the other side. Where are the littering signs we used to have? Woodsy Owl where are you? Our area is looking_like the projects with all the dumping. Read up about how long it takes trash to decompose. Road side trash also makes your property decrease in value. Keep a bag in your car for garbage and put it in the dumpster or trash can. This is a beautiful area with lakes, rivers and woods.

Better impression

WILMINGTON-Regarding the Red Carpet Festival and the impression we gave all those visitors who walked through our downtown Saturday. As my husband and I walked through the vendor booths I couldn't help but be embarrassed about the looks of the buildings. Flower pots with no flowers, just cigarette butts; broken awnings just hanging; boarded up windows; buildings that need to be painted; cigarette butts all over the sidewalks in front of the taverns. The list could go on and on. I'm not trying to fault anyone or the chamber for putting on the festival. It just seems to me there is a big disconnect between having an event where we invite Route 66 travelers to come here so they can see the unkept buildings and dirty downtown district. Couldn't some of the business owners have swept their sidewalks or at least made an effort to cleanup a bit? I am really embarrassed to even think about the way people view our city. My suggestion is that they move the festival to one of our island parks where it would be more scenic and you could still have the flea market and activities without having them see all the run- down buildings. I hope organizers would consider that

Singing praise
I would like to sing praises for Dr. Dean, a chiropractor. I had been away for several months and could not locate him or his new location. So I goggled it and found him. I'm so happy to have such a good Christian chiropractor. He takes care of my sciatica. Dr. Dean is wonderful.

Fix Obamacare

BRAIDWOOD-Seems like the liberal media has sided up with Democrats concerning Obamacare. All the TV commentators are saying is how it will hurt the poor and the elderly when, in reality, Obamacare was doing nothing but hurting middle income workers. We signed up for it early because we couldn't get health care for our son. We paid our premiums, took a high deductible, and yet it was costing us more each year. Our first policy was canceled because the insurance company bailed out. So we had to sign up with a different company at a higher rate and now we're paying 40 percent more than when we first signed up. There is no way we can afford it anymore as we're better off not having insurance because then the hospital would have to treat us like all the other people who show up and get health care for free. U.S. House repealed it because like President Trump said it was on the road to failure. At least with the repeal maybe they can fix it so the burden isn't shouldered so much by middle income families while others get health care for free.

Got my tax bill

WILMINGTON—I just got my new tax and it went up $200 this year without the new fire district referendum. What is going to happen next year, will it go up $500-$700? This is crazy. People should open their eyes and stop screwing up. Now we are really going to pay for it. I think all the taxing districts should be doing what they can to lower our taxes instead of just keep raising them. Now I know why the governor wants to put a freeze on property taxes because this really hurts our family. We'd be better off renting than trying to own a home then we wouldn't have to sorry about paying more property taxes every year.

New contract

COAL CITY-I see the headline reads the custodians were granted a new five year contract. I have a question for our board. Does this mean the elementary school will be clean now? I went with my grandson for grandparents day and the place should be considered an embarrassment. I have seen cleaner port-a-johns than the rest rooms and the board and custodians should all be ashamed.

Not one, but two

COAL CITY-In referabout running a hose from your house out to the road for drainage. While waiting for a train to pass I noticed a house on East Division Street that has not one, but two hoses running from their yard straight out to the road. That doesn't seem right either and it's not like they try to hide it.

Time will tell

WILMINGTON—So the new Mayor wants to be a good old boy." Why not, with the cash that they spent to get him in office he should join the club. There was definitely a hidden agenda to get him elected by the good old boys. Time will tell what the good old boys will get in return for the money spent to put him in office.

COAL CITY—I guess some people in Coal City don't know why there is a lid on their garbage cans. I will tell you, it's on there to keep your garbage from blowing all over your neighbor's yard on a windy day. Try closing it.

Thankful for return

WILMINGTON—I would like to express my sincere appreciation to the gentleman who found my wallet Saturday at the Red Carpet Days downtown. Unbeknownst to me, I had lost my wallet after making a purchase at one of the booths. He found it and turned it over to two police officers who were on patrol there at the time, Todd Lyons and Officer Campos. Todd recognized me from the picture and name on my driver's license and returned the wallet to me before I even had realized it was missing.

Respect other's property

DIAMOND—It appears as though the construction is done on the bike path/dog walk after eight long months of looking at the mess. I think it's a total disgrace the way Construction and the mayor of Diamond treated the homeowners on the south end of the path. We were not taken into consideration or given prior notice of this poorly planned event. Trees were damaged, property was encroached. They say beauty is in the eyes of the beholder? I see danger, debris and dog poop. When I asked the engineer if they were coming back to clean up the debris he said technically it's up to the farmer to clean up that edge of the path. What? The farmer didn't make the mess. Also, FYI dog owners, it's against the law to not pick up after your pet so people carry the bags and please respect what privacy we have left.

See it first hand

BRACEVILLE—In response to last week's letter in soundoff titled It's all true. i ne three union board members nave spent thousands in negotiation and lawyer fees to prevent the village employees from protecting their jobs by joining the Teamsters Union. This situation would never have happened if the three board members, one in particular on the financial committee, didn't bully, scream and threaten the employees. I urge all Braceville residents to go to a board meeting and see their behavior first hand. They scream insults, pound their fists on the table and threaten the mayor. People have stood up against them for their behavior and they don't like it. The meetings are not ran for the village, they are ran for the board to insult and abuse people. If you have been a victim of these insults and abuse from the board, call Grundy County and fill out a complaint. Believe me, if the taxpayers of Braceville had known that these three members, wolves dressed in sheep's clothing, intended to behave in this manner, they would not be in office. They should be publishing a public apology to the people of Braceville and hanging their heads in

Can't separate the two WILMINGTON—The difference between the prolife and pro-abortion movements is not that we love the baby and they love the mother. The real difference is that they think you can separate the two and we say you can't. You cannot kill a baby without hurting the mother, and you cannot protect the baby without loving the mother. We have been called to a love that recognizes the intimate union of mother and child. May they flourish together in love and protec-

A bloody stalemate

BRAIDWOOD—Read 2001 American's longest war has cost the United States nearly $1 trillion and lives of more than 2,300 military personnel. Another 20,000 were wound-home with minds scarred by post-tramatic stress disorder. Victory in Afghanistan remains out of reach. Afghanistan's' corrupt central government remains. Civilian and Afghan military casualties are rising. ISIS is launching more suicide bomb attacks and Afghan opium production recently hit an all time high. We can't walk away from this permanently failing state. Taliban insurgents would take power and foreign jihadists would be free to set up terrorist training camps again. In Afghanistan the best result our bombs, blood and treasure can buy is a bloody endless stalemate. Just stay out of the United States.

To all moms

WILMINGTON-Mother's Day is Sunday and it's a time when every mom deserves hugs and kisses. You don't have to buy us gifts, a card with a heartfelt, sincere message will do. Sadly, kids don't make that effort anymore. A text message, like I got last year, was so impersonal but a card is something every mom would cherish. Happy Mother's Day to all moms.

Nothing for free

BRAIDWOOD—President Obama planned an event at the University of Chicago to encourage the young to become involved in very liberal politics. The news media gave the impression he was doing this for free and out of the kindness of his heart. Truth is, he was paid $400,000 to talk a few hours. President Obama does nothing

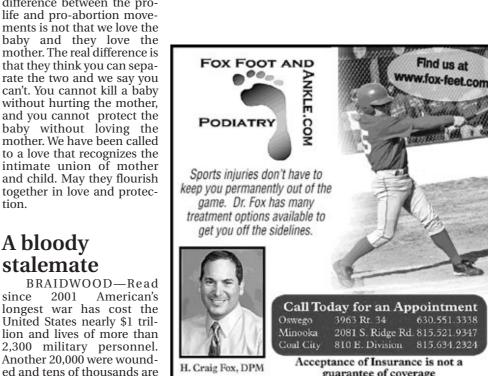

A jungle out there

BRAIDWOOD—We support the state of Arkansas capital punishment. All the states should be considering once again having capital punishment. Not with lethal injection. Just use a firing squad and you'll never know which gun held the real bullet. Six months after the crime beyond a reasonable doubt - it's over. Police officers are being gunned down weekly across the United States. Without law and order a dictator could easily take over. The big cities are becoming jungles.

Not a leader

WILMINGTON—As our wonderful president said before the election, Mexico will pay for the wall. Ha ha, looks like we are picking up the tab for his great wall. With his big mouth it looks like he will get us in a war with North Korea. That leader is more of an idiot than our leader.

The wheel that weaved its way into history

FREE PRESS NEWSPAPERS

It's been called one of mankind's earliest self-powered machines and it was found last week while touring one of Wilmington's larg-er antique malls, Milltown Market.

The shop is located at 508 N. Kankakee St., just a hop and skip from Water Street shopping, and has room after room of large and small antiques.

Two rooms in, is where The White Glove spied the large 1800s spinning wheel priced at $275. The apparatus appears to be made of solid oak and stands about four feet tall and stretches nearly five feet wide.

The spinning wheel was designed to weave plant and animal fibers into thread and yarn. Spinning wheels are believed to have originated in either China or India, somewhere between year 500 and the 10th century. By the 13th century, half the world was using a spin wheel.

For 8,000 years fiber was twisted by hand, a long tedious process done out of necessity to stitch clothing. But once the spin wheel came along yarn, rope and thread could be made 100

A PRIMITIVE SPINNING wheel turned the head of The White Glove last week in Wilmington. Spinning wheels have been used to turn plant and animal fibers into thread for fabrics for over 1,000 years.

Spinning required only takes to make a quilt or wool a pair of hands and a stick held horizontally between

One of the main uses for thread and yarn is to become woven into cloth on a loom. So with the invention, fabric making took off.

Up until the wheel was invented, unless you were wealthy or royalty, you had to spin your own thread and weave your own fabric in order to make clothing, sheets, blankets and more.

Think about the time it blanket. Imagine how much more time it would take if you had to weave together the yarn first. And, depending on the household, having to make four or five blankets and clothing for five would be an endless task. A small, non-stop army of spinners, weavers and seamstresses would have been needed just to keep everyone clothed. No wonder people rarely owned more than one set of clothing rich or poor, if you were master of your own castle, one could expect to find distant relatives, servants and dependents living there too. It would take forever just to hand spin enough thread for all of their clothing, let alone the rest of the steps needed to complete the task.

Before the spinning wheel evolved, Vikings sailed on longboats fastened with sails spun on drop spindles. The thread for these massive tarps would have taken many, many months to spin before weaving could even take place, making preparation for finding new lands nearly as difficult as the voyages that lied ahead. A dramatic expansion in sail making took place after the wheel was introduced. With bigger sails being made in shorter amounts of time, the size and speeds of ships increased. This is believed to have been a crucial factor in Europe's colonization of the Americas, Africa and India. Without larger sails, bigger boats would have not been possible. And without big boats, no one would have ever been able to reach other continents.

Prior to the 13th century, books were made from parchment, a thin, paperlike material made from prepared animal skin. It was to make and was the main product used for writing during ancient and Medieval times. To make one copy of the Bible from parchment, the skins from 300 sheep or calves would be needed.

According to Lynn Townsend White Jr., professor of Medieval history at Princeton, the spinning wheel caused a breakthrough in production of linen clothes and rags in Europe.

It is because of a rag surplus, he said, that paper production began. The extra rags were soaked, strained and dried into sheets of paper that was much easier, and far cheaper, to make than that of parchment. Europeans began large-scale production of the new "cheap" paper. In turn, production of affordable books, broadsheets and opportunities for universal education took place.

own clothes, quilts or draperies. But chances are, no one is still working a wheel to spin the thread unless they are a purist or artisan. They just go to the store or click a button on their phone to buy fabric. So, since thread spin ning by wheel has become another one of the world's lost arts, it can be assumed that where these ancient spoolers fit in today is with current The beyond displaying as backdrop decorations in one's home, is to alter them to fit the needs people are looking to fill. Some of the most common items they are currently being repurposed into are end tables, chandeliers and wall art.

That's what makes this oak spinner a perfect find for anyone who loves to sew.

Stamp Out Hunger food drive on May 13

On Saturday, May 13, the National Association of Letter Carriers, United States Postal Service and other partners are asking the community to Stamp Out Hunger.

This is the 25th anniversary of the food drive, which has grown into a national effort that provides assistance to the millions of Americans struggling to help put food on the table.

The Stamp Out Hunger food drive, held on the second Saturday in May, has become the nation's largest singleday food drive. In 2016, generous Americans donated 80.1 million pounds of food, feeding millions of

This was the 13th consecutive year of at least 70 million pounds collected by letter carriers, bringing the grand total to 1.5 billion pounds of food collected, since the Food Drive began in

To make a donation, leave a bag of nonperishable food items by the mailbox to help your neighbors in need. The top requested non-perishable food items are cereal, pasta, pasta sauce or spaghetti sauce, rice, canned fruits and vegetables, canned meals such as soups, chili and pasta, 100 percent juice, peanut butter, macaroni and cheese, canned protein (tuna, chicken and turkey), and canned or dry beans.

You also can donate healthy, lowsodium, low-sugar items such as beans, oatmeal and other whole grains, and canola or olive oil. On Saturday, May 13. Letter carriers will collect these food donations as they deliver the mail and take them to local food banks.

The need for food assistance exists in every community in America. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, 50 million Americans are food insecure, meaning they live at risk of hunger. Perhaps most alarming is the fact that nearly 16 million children in America are struggling with hunger. Additionally, close to 5 million seniors face choices between paying rent, utilities, and having nutritious food.

This year's partners are the U.S.

Postal Service, the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association (NRLCA), the United Food and Commercial Workers International Union (UFCW), Valpak, United Way Worldwide, the AFL-CIO, the AARP Foundation and On Facebook, "like" a doubt the darling of the Derby, and this year an estimated 127,000 Mint Juleps were made from over 1,000 pounds of mint. If you watched Always Dreaming win while sipping a Mint Julep, you kept with tradition. But now that the derby is over meet the Julep's lesser known cousin, the Whiskey To be honest with you, I have never been crazy about the Mint Julep. Seems like I have one or two a year at a Kentucky Derby watch party, and I am okay to wait a year to have another. I am a fan of mint and I am a fan of whiskey. As a lover of classic cocktails, it seems like I would be first in line for a good Mint Julep. The drink has always fallen a bit flat on my palate, like there's something A few years ago I found what I was missing. I collect vintage cocktail/bartending books and have encountered several variations of the Whiskey Smash, which began life as a Julep over 150 years ago.

The first time I glanced at a Smash recipe I thought that it was simply another name for a Mint Julep as the two cocktails both use sugar, bourbon and muddled mint.

The "something extra" in a Smash cocktail is the addition of citrus, specifically "seasonal" citrus.

The Smash family of cocktails has evolved into one of the most diverse subtypes of cocktails. Simply put, a Smash is your favorite spirit, herb (usually mint), sugar and citrus.

As long as you work within those parameters you have a smash. There are Tequila Smashes, Gin Smashes and Brandy Smashes. If it's a spirit, you can smash it.

The most common citrus used in the modern-day smash is fresh lemon juice. Lemon juice plays well in cocktails with whiskey, sugar and mint. By the way, the Smash is not strictly a "Southern" cocktail

Can I inherit my parent's debt?

Dear Savvy Senior, What happens to a person's debt after they die? My mother has taken on a lot of medical and credit card over the past few years and I'm worried that my brother and I will be responsible for it when she dies. What

Worried daughter

Dear Worried,

In most cases when a person with debt dies, it's their estate, not their kids, that is legally responsible. Here's how it works.

When your mom dies, her estate - which consists of the stuff she owns while she's alive (home, car, cash, etc.) - will be responsible for paying her debts. If she doesn't have enough cash to pay her debts, you'll have to sell her assets and pay off her creditors with the pro-

Whatever is left over is passed along to her heirs as dictated by the terms of her will, if she has one.

If she doesn't have a will, the intestacy laws of the state she resides in will determine how her estate will be distrib-

If, however, she dies broke, or there isn't enough money left over to pay her "unsecured debts" - credit cards, medical bills, personal loans - then her estate is declared insolvent, and her creditors will have to eat the loss. 'Secured debts" - loans attached to an asset such as a house or a car - are a different story. If she has a mortgage or car loan when she dies, those monthly payments will need to be made by her estate or heirs, or the lender can seize the

There are, however, a couple of exceptions that would make you legally responsible for her debt after she passes away. One is if you are a joint holder on a credit card account that she owes on. And the other is if you co-signed a loan

Jim Miller

Note to spouses

These same debt inheritance rules apply to surviving spouses too, unless you live in a community property state - Arizona, California, Idaho, Louisiana, Nevada, New Mexico, Texas, Washington or Wisconsin.

In these states, any debts that one spouse acquires after the start of a marriage belongs to the other spouse too. Therefore, spouses in community property states are usually responsible for their deceased spouses debts.

Protected assets

If your mom has any IRAs, 401(k)s, brokerage accounts, life insurance policies or employer-based pension plans, these are assets that creditors usually cannot get access to. That's because these accounts typically have designated beneficiaries, and the money goes directly to those people without passing through the estate.

Settling her estate

You also need to be aware that if your mom dies with debt, and she has no assets, settling her estate should be fairly simple. Her executor will need to send out letters to her creditors explaining the situation, including a copy of her death certificate, and that will probably take care of it. But, you and your brother may still have to deal with aggressive debt collectors who try to guilt you into paying.

If your mom has some assets, but not enough to pay all her debts, her state's probate court has a distinct list of what bills get priority. The details vary by state, but generally estate administrating fees, funeral expenses, taxes and last illness medical bills get paid first, followed by secured debts and lastly, credit card debts.

Need help?

If you have questions regarding your situation, you should consult with a consumer law attorney or probate attorney. Or, if you just need a question or two answered, your state's legal hotline if available (visit LegalHotlines.org), or legal services provider.

Are fuel cell cars available for United States drivers?

Dear EarthTalk: Is it true that fuel cell cars are finally available for mainstream drivers in the United

> Jack Mixson Wilmington, DE

For years, green car enthusiasts have been heralding the dawn of a new era of pollution-free driving powered by fuel cells, which combine readily available hydrogen with oxygen to fire up the engine. NASA created the first commercial grade fuel cells in the 1960s to power satellites and space capsules, and automakers have been talking up their potential for use in cars and trucks ever since.

But the idea has never gotten beyond the prototype stage, due mostly to the lack of any refueling infrastructure. After all, drivers are used to being able to refill their tanks on almost every corner, while the new generation of electric and plug-in hybrid and electric vehicles (EVs) can be recharged from any electrical outlet.

But fuel cell vehicles (FCVs) may still represent the holy grail of auto travel because they combine the environmental benefits of electric vehicles (no reliance on fossil fuels and no pollution) with the driving range (300 miles between refueling) of conventional cars.

While GM, Hyundai and Daimler are heavily invested in fuel cell vehicle production, Toyota and Honda are already offering fuel cell vehicles for sale or lease to drivers in California, given the Golden State's head start in creating a hydrogen refueling network.

According Fuel Partnership, 27 hydrogen refueling stations are already up and running around metro Los Angeles and the Bay Area, with 33 more coming online soon.

Toyota's Mirai FCV seats four and offers all the trimmings of any new car-touchscreen entertainment, dual climate control, steering wheel mounted controls, radar to prevent accidents and help with parking, and a 312-mile range per fill-up. The MSRP on the Mirai is $57,500, but Toyota is currently offering $7,500 back. Another option is a 36month lease on the Mirai for $349 a month plus $2,499 up

Meanwhile, Honda's new Clarity FCV is similarly appointed but offers a roomier interior (seating for five) and a longer range (366 miles per fill-up).

Californians can lease the Clarity (it's not for sale in the U.S.) for $369 a month for 36 months plus $2,868 due at signing, with Honda covering the first $15,000 worth of hydrogen fuel.

Drivers behind the TOYOTA'S MIRAI fuel cell vehicle is already available in California, the only state with any kind of hydrogen refueling infrastructure in place.

wheel of the Mirai or Clarity qualify for a one-time $5,000 tax rebate from California for driving a green car, not to mention access to HOV lanes statewide even with just a single occupant.

Of course, fuel cell drivers won't want to leave California just yet. Outside of the Golden State, there are exactly three publicly accessible hydrogen refueling sta-(Massachusetts, Connecticut and South Carolina each have one). Toyota, in partnership with France's Air Liquide, will start to roll-out a new network of hydrogen refueling stations around the northeastern United States so drivers there can start to enjoy the benefits of driving the latest, greatest and greenest technology ever to grace the American road.

Illinois has elected just two wealthy people to major statewide office in the last 20 years: Former U.S. Sen. Peter Fitzgerald and Gov. Bruce Rauner.

Both candidates won because they ran as firm, anti-establishment outsiders. Fitzgerald was best known as a state Senator in the 1990s for railing against the elders who ran his Republican Party, including many who had been supplying the GOP with loads of money over the years and who'd used their positions to handsomely profit off of state business. Rauner also ran against his party's insiders when he launched his campaign, dismissing them as bought and paid for by Springfield's special inter-establishment party support both men did receive mostly came at the end of their general election campaigns. Their personal finances, which allowed them to self-fund, kept them free of establishment taint. and that independence gave both of them credibility as figures decided they'd better swallow their pride and get on board. establishment needed the insurgents more than the insurgents needed the establishment. Billionaire governor. Insiders, elected officials and politically connected union leaders have been jumping on his bandwagon from the get-go, usually after being impressed with Pritzker during one-onone meetings.

Democrat Pritzker isn't following this pat-

The game plan seems pretty obvious. Pritzker doesn't want those folks and groups endorsing Chris Kennedy, whose last name is still immensely popular and whose own connections over the decades would've guaranteed him support from his party's elders if Pritzker and his infinite bank account hadn't stepped in. Kennedy doesn't have Pritzker's kind of money, so Kennedy is perceived as needing support the directing tern as he campaigns for traffic. Starve Kennedy of money and foot soldiers and maybe he'll drop out.

Madigan

Kennedy, whose personal wealth is substantial, but nothing like Pritzker's, has made some half-hearted attempts to claim that endorsements don't matter whenever he loses them. But he hasn't vet embraced (or maybe doesn't even recognize) the role that's literally being thrust upon him. Kennedy's originally preferred path of being the widely endorsed "inevitable" candidate is now owned by Pritzker.

By default, Kennedy's now the most prominent "outsider" in the race.

After almost two and a half years of Rauner's rule, the government is in shambles. Rauner's first campaign video back in 2013 complained that the state had the highest unemployment in the Midwest," and that's still true today. He pointed to the state's "lowest credit rating in America," and that's only gotten worse. "Springfield is broken; $8,000 in pension debt for every man, woman and child," Rauner bemoaned in the video. That figure is now $10,000.

can work with Springfield to solve our massive problems and get us back to a semblance of normalcy after three populist governors in a row couldn't get anything done. That appears to be where both Pritzker and Kennedy are going.

If Rauner doesn't obtain a budget deal, he will simply run against the establishment again, claiming the evil powers that be (Speaker Madigan) have blocked him at every turn, but that he is "very close" to breaking their self-serving logjam. And, indeed, if he is re-elected after what could be four years of gridlock, the Democrats will have to start working with Democrats claim Rauner hid his "real" agenda from voters in 2014. But that agenda is now crystal clear to everyone.

Almost half of Illinois Democrats voted for insurgent presidential candidate Bernie Sanders a year ago. A recent poll by the Paul Simon Public Policy Institute showed that Gov. Rauner is slightly more popular than Madigan Speaker Chicago, of all places.

So, an authentic, independent, populist message from the late Robert Kennedy's sincere, accomplished and mild-mannered son could very well resonate.

One of the things you can't help but notice in the press coverage of Kennedy's Downstate appearances is the reports on crowd size. His family name is packing halls all over the place as locals come out to witness a part of history.

The obvious question is So, maybe Illinois voters whether Kennedy can sus-
