Best local concert you'll hear this summer

The love of music led Wes Smith, and his wife, Tracy Smith, to start the Wilmington Area Community Band (WACB) 17 years ago. Forming the band was a labor of love between two dedi-

Wes plays tuba while Tracy is keyboardist. It may sound sappy, but you might even say they make beautiful music

"I had grown up in the Pekin area which has had a municipal band for years," Wes said. "I played during high school band back in the 80s and I missed it. I wanted to get some kind of community band back together.'

It takes a considerable amount of dedication (and a boatload of lung power) to play a tuba. Smith's tenacity carries over into keeping WACB on the right

"I'd say that playing a tuba would probably count as physical education in certain circles,' Smith said, grinning.

Meanwhile, Tracy, who just retired her position as music teacher at Stevens Intermediate School, District 209-U, is WACB's music director. She's in charge of music selection for the season, which she begins in February, while a librarian keeps the folders full of music in good order.

When she's not conducting WABC, Tracy, a trumpeter in college, plays keyboard for area musicals.

WACB hit its stride quickly, barreling along full steam ahead COVID-19 pandemic canceled the 2020 season

"That was a really difficul time for us, just like it was a tough time for everyone," Smith said. "COVID really sidelined us, and no one was really sure which way it might go.'

Story Walk makes its debut in Northcrest

WELCOME IMPROVEMENTS were made to Northcrest Park on Wednesday when Lucas and Sons Paving put down a new coat of asphalt on the former skate board park which will now serve as a full basketball court, two pickleball courts, shuffleboard grid and hopscotch. The Wilmington Park District and Wilmington Public Library District worked together to also create a story walk featuring 24 stations where a story is told while progressing the trail. The walk was completed just in time for Saturday's Summer Reading Kickoff party which featured knight shield and crown making, jousting, face painting, a sword fighting skit, magician look at "Jug Town." I suppose most of us who are not farmers don't think much about the soil below our feet. But a farmer will tell you that the type of soil makes a great difference. In general, the area around the coal mines had poor soils, not good for growing things. Much of the land was marshy, with quicksand everywhere. Goose Lake was more of a shallow marsh than a true deep lake in the "Wisconsin" sense of the word. But near its west end, a bed of clay was discovered.

Perhaps in this day and age, that discovery would not mean much, but in mid-19th century it meant a lot. Clay is the main ingredient in pottery.

pottery absolute necessity the household. Pottery vessels held everything from water to sauerkraut, from sausages pre-served in their own fat to homemade cherry wine. In late 1855 William White came to this area from Utica, New York where his family was engaged in the pottery business. Together with Charles Walker, the firm of White and Company built a pottery works near the clay deposits. In his old pottery works in Utica, the clay was mined elsewhere and delivered to the pottery, costing quite a bit of money for transportation. Here there would be no delivery costs. We will see later that this was a fatal decision.

It was also about this time that a new use for pottery became popular. Clay field tiles to drain city sites had long been used. But it wasn't until the mid19th century that farmers learned that rich soils lay below marshy areas, and draining them meant a huge increase in produc-

Two different sites produced both tiles and household pottery. But the pottery works were only part of the community that lived there. There were two boarding houses and at least four homes to house the workers and their families. There was also a school house, a communal room or hall, and at least two stores. The 1860 census tells us that there were nine households there, with a total of 55 individu-

At the tile production site, tiles were formed by extrusion, then dried and stacked into a kiln, then fired. After cooling, the tiles were stacked in the yard for transportation elsewhere.

At the stoneware manufactory the vessels were formed by hand. The process began by mining the clay from the banks of Goose Lake, then transporting it to the workshop

It was dumped into "clay pits" to freeze over winter. Passing through the freeze/thaw cycle greatly increased its workability. It was then passed through a mill to pulverize it, mixed with water to a proper consistency and finally turned on wheels.

The craftsmen that lived at Jug Town were highly skilled. They earned $42.50 ($1,470) per month, compared to average unskilled laborers who made only $3.50 ($120) per month. The less skilled workers at the tile factory made $26.00 ($900) per

The stoneware produced their consisted of minimally decorated saltglazed jars, bowls (milk pans) and jugs. All of them more or less made individually, by hand. Thus, any Jug Town Pottery you may find today varies in size, shape, and decoration.

In the end, the firm of White and Walker went out of business; they were never able to pay back the $10,000 they originally borrowed to start the pottery works.

They soon discovered that transporting heavy, bulky, breakable goods over poorly developed swampy roads to get to the I & M Canal was extremely costly. In addition, their remote location in the swamps of Goose Lake made marketing a problem. The partnership and pottery works were dissolved in 1866.

The 1874 Grundy County shows two "old potteries" still on the map, but by 1890 they no longer appeared on the plat maps. By 1910 the majority of the buildings were in ruins, the foundations were removed and the land plowed over for planting. The large drying shed was still upright; it was divided in two and half moved to another farm site. The kilns lasted a bit

In 1969 the State of Illinois purchased the site and other property to create Goose Lake Prairie State Natural Area.

One store town

WILMINGTON—It is so sad that we've now become a one grocery store town. Went to shop at Valle's Produce Sunday and the store was closed up. I've shopped there all the time when it was Baron's Foods, Bellettini Foods and then Valles Produce. In it's heyday it was like going to visit family with all the friendly workers who gave good customer service, fresh meat and produce and the hardworking people in the deli baking bread, doughnuts and frying the best chicken. But that all started to go away when the dollar stores came to town. See what dollar stores do to small towns. We had three in Wilmington when Bellettini's sold to Valle's and it didn't take long before things went downhill. I suppose some of it was self-inflicted but I know when the dollar stores came you didn't see them donating back or sponsoring any youth sports team. Bellettini's sponsored my grandson's baseball team, gave so much to Kuzma Care Cottage and helped local groups like the Lions and Rotary use the BBQ sandwich trailer. You won't see the dollar stores doing that. No, the dollar stores come in, steal away what grocery business they can and take their profits out of the community. They rely on little to no customer service, making you self check-out. I refuse to spend my money at a dollar store because they do more harm than good for small towns. Let's hope this town doesn't become like other small towns and become a grocery desert.

How we got here

SHADOW LAKES—It's kind of strange how nobody talks about the biggest Trump accomplishment during his presidency. I'm talking about the tariffs war. Γhe brilliant idea of imposing a big tax on imports at a time when everything was shut down because of the pandemic. The U.S. is heavily dependent on imports from almost every country in the world but specifically from China. Trump's tariffs raised prices on almost everything we buy at the store. That, in combination that production was shut down because of the pandemic, caused one of the worst inflations this country had seen in decades. The Biden administration is not free of responsibility because they might have been able to roll back some of the tariffs to bring down prices. But why would they, they're the government and the government loves tax money. They don't care much how they get it. The tariffs' impact has settled and inflation is going up at a more sustainable rate. Wages are going up for most Americans and eventually will catch up with inflation. Unfortunately, wages are not going up for everyone, some people are being left behind. And those people are the ones who are more susceptible to fall victims to Trump's lies. But if you're not happy with the economy just #### remember how it got to where it is now. Blind council

WILMINGTON—Great Wilmington City Council. Your backwards thinking by not letting Berkot's sell full liquor is a slap in the face to the shoppers of Wilmington. Why must you always protect a few businesses? Why are you so hard headed that you refuse to allow competition to exist? Why even bother with "shop local" campaign? Things like this is why money goes to other towns. It is sad that the council only thinks of a few businesses and not the people of the town. Let the consumer decide where they want to

Speeders beware

COAL CITY—At the Coal City Area Club a lot of new members and a lot of old members are speeding through the campgrounds. You are being watched and could cost you and your family time away from the club, Camping areas are 5 mph. With the Fourth of July coming up and lots of family and friends at the club, extra caution is needed. Let's not ruin your day or ours by speeding. It's only a slight second for reactions when a child or adult walks out and you have to stop. "Be Safe, Drive Safe" enjoy.

Lost leadership

BRAIDWOOD—Lost: dependable, trustworthy and open leadership. If found please return to city hall. Please help us find true leadership; it have been missing for several years.

Open to terrorists

WILMINGTON—Homeland Security and the FBI now say because of our open southern borders a terrorist attack is now not a if, but a where and when. Liberals call Trump and his voters Nazis and white supremacist but it's the liberals and their college kids that support Hamas and attack Jews so who are part of the prob-

Flower thief

COAL CITY—This is to the low-life who stole the potted flowers from my mother's grave around Memorial Day. I don't know why I'm putting this in the paper because you probably can't read, but that was such an inhumane act.

Wake up America

DIAMOND—The people that don't understand why anyone would vote for President Trump do not understand the meaning of freedom. You have closed your eyes to the way the Americans are being treated by today's leaders and you also must realize the judicial system is corrupt. But you live in an area or have a life of luxury which does not include the poor or disabled, senior citizens that live on a fixed income that struggle with high prices. So why don't you move to Chicago and pretend there is no crime caused by policies in favor of criminal activity. So go commit a crime and claim to be a migrant and you will go free to commit more crimes. Wake up to reality. When God was passing out brains did you think he said rains and you asked for the caboose?

Respects nobody

BRAIDWOOD—I don't understand how women can vote for Trump. He has no respect for them. He flip flops on abortion as well as other issues. At a rally in Las Vegas he talked about sharks, who cares. He just talks about himself constantly. He has no respect for veterans, he's a draft dodger and said John McCain was a loser since he was a prisoner for five years. Really? He pardons all his buddies, do you see Biden pardoning his son? He's a bully just like Putin. Do you want him to run our country? Think hard before you

Call and wait

DIAMOND—So there's defund the police movement and all our leaders will say is "they must get money from somewhere, but not our pockets or our protection of tax payers funds." So if your life is in danger you will have to wait for help to arrive and if you take the law into your own hands then you will be put into jail. So what our leaders are really say ing is that they don't want to give any help to the citizens. But if the American citizens want any help just tell them to call ghost busters.

In the minority

WILMINGTON—The Republicans have lost the popular vote in the last seven out of eight presidential elections which explains why they have given up on Democracy. They have to rely on the electoral college which was written into the Constitution to appease the slave states. And that is why we have a tyranny of the #### minority. Outrage for veterans

COAL CITY—A few weeks ago we honored those who gave the ultimate sacrifice on Memorial Day. A few days later we honored the troops who stormed the beach at Normandy which was the beginning of the end for Hitler's empire. Then last week we celebrated Flag Day. How upsetting it was to find out that a Republican Supreme Court Judge was flying our American Flag upside down to support those fools who believed in the big lie about the last election. This disgusting man should resign from the court immediately for desecrating the flag that adorned the caskets of our nation's heroes. But apparently there are no consequences for what Supreme Court judges do. That huge rumbling sound you hear is not a thunderstorm or an earthquake. It is coming from the veterans cemetery in Elwood where our deceased veterans are rolling in their graves at this outrage.

have money to buy new equipment. And Fay Smith was told he couldn't buy new equipment by the administrator on several occasions. You don't have money. Fay was trying to replace both 22 yr. and 28 yr. old dump trucks. Nope, no money. Same administrator is now in a purchasing frenzy. Why? Election in April 2025 and has to look good and says he's moving the city forward. The city recently purchased the administrator a new 2024 GMC SUV at city hall. At a recent council meeting the city purchased a new dump truck and at last week's meeting the street commissioner advised the council he's purchasing a new 2024 Chevy Pickup from Arnie Bauer for the street foreman, waiving competitive bids to keep purchases local since they will be part of Braidwood. How can you waive competitive bids when you never advertised in the paper of circulation for any bids to be submitted? Making phone calls to ask for quotes isn't how it works Mr. Administrator. Competitive bidding is a process of issuing a public bid with the intent that companies will put together their best proposal and compete for a specific project or purchase. Competitive bidding allows transparency and equality of opportunity. Bids are then submitted from different companies, next a bid letting and last a recommendation for bid approval by the city council. This hasn't been the case with this administrator and council for the last five years which is a violation of the law.

Cut the grass

BRAIDWOOD—I went to visit my father's grave at the Mount Olivet Cemetery in Braidwood. I was shocked how tall the grass is. Why haven't they been cutting? We make monthly donations to the cemetery maintenance fund. Where is this money going? Workers need to step up or step down.

Long Trump list

GARDNER—Yes, it does take a long time to talk about all of Biden's accomplishments and that should be a good thing. The list gets longer and longer every day. Your two words for Trump were hilarpeers, convicted of fraud, traitor, liar, dictator wannabe, psychopath, cruel, uncar wants loyalty, but can't give it, calls soldiers and Veterans suckers and losers, thinks there should be just one religion women and the disabled, thinks Nazi protesters were fine people, never did busihim out of every jam), never paid his contractors, and lied about his taxes. He quotes Hitler and loves dictators. Hates Democracy because there are rules. He got us out of the nuclear deal with Iran and now they have more power and weapons. He took us out of the Paris Climate agreement. The weather gets worse and worse every day. We're either on fire or under water. He wanted to shoot peaceful protesters and told the border patrol to go ahead and shoot migrants and he would pardon them later. And finally (but not really), he hates his supporters. He told his buddies that he only needed you to vote for him one more time in 2020 and he wouldn't have to deal with you again. He, his Republican puppets, and Fox News just keep saying the dumbest things to see how much you'll swallow and you never disappoint. They literally can't keep a straight face when they say it. He can't put a sentence together and brags about passing a dumb test that doesn't mean anything. I take it every year. Big deal. Over compensating? He projects everything he has done, will do, or is thinking about doing onto someone else. He's a scared little creature who is only running to stay out of jail. He's stolen classified documents and shown them to God only knows who and is a huge securi-

Letter to the editor

If Trump is the best the Republicans can do then God help us

As Americans prepare for another for political favors. He has even stooped to He spent 380 of his 1,461 days in office on presidential election we should reflect on our former presidents - most of whom served with honor and distinction at home and abroad.

A sterling example is that of former president, Jimmy Carter, a Christian and most decent man who, with his wife, devoted their lives even after the White House to humanitarian work all over the world.

The Republican party, dredging the bottom of their candidate barrel, offer as their best candidate a man who is a convicted felon ( now banned from 34 countries), a serial adulterer, pathological liar, greedy grifter, sexual predator, philanderer, narcissist, slanderer, Nazi sympathizer, thief of government document and insurrectionist. He attempted to extort $1 billion from the oil companies in exchange cheat at golf.

And what is the legacy of his previous term? How did he make an already great America "great again"? He never came to work until noon, he destroyed government documents, created the most corrupt and conflicted Supreme Court in history, wasted millions in taxpayer money building the wall to nowhere now rusting in the desert not even a worthy tourist attraction. He embarrassed us at home and abroad.

He tore up the beautiful White House rose garden to hold a political rally so he could charge the attendees $1200/night to stay at his hotel. He held his brother's funeral in the White House so he could charge those invitees also at his hotel. He spent 250 days of his tenure at his residences (notably Mar-A-Lago) at a cost of personal trips. He charged the secret service and his entourage $800/night and $3 for bottled water to the government.

Carter, by the way, spent only 79 days on vacation during his four-year term. Trump insulted and alienated our valued allies in Europe. He came back emptyhanded from North Korea -just a publicity stunt. He incited his violent thug followers to storm, severely damage and ransack our nation's Capitol building. Our Vice President was badgered and bullied to falsify the electoral college votes. The elected officials in Georgia and elsewhere were harassed to find extra votes for him by whatever illegal means. The former president would do away ty threat to everyone. So much crime -More later if I have time....VOTE!

This Republican candidate called the January 6 rioters "patriots" and referred to our brave military as "losers". I have seen the heartbreaking long rows of white crosses at Arlington, Normandy in France plus the Pearl Harbor monument in Hawaii- monuments to the very dear price paid to live free in America. For this terrible price of freedom do we forfeit all to a wanna-be tyrant?

To offer this profoundly flawed individual for our nation's highest office is an insult and affront to every American. If this is the best the Republican party can offer then God help us and God save the United States of America supposed to be a simple storage warehouse for the Metra transit agency has now buried nation's fourthbusiest commuter rail system in a sinking money pit, the ABC7 I-Team has learned."

How can Metra be trusted now?

Rich Miller

Chicago broadcast station's scoop last week is an almost perfect encapsulation of why northeastern Illinois' mass transit fiefdoms need to be busted and reformed.

For your background, the Chicago regional transit system is facing a steep $730 million operating funding fiscal cliff in Fiscal Year 2026, which starts a year from July 1. Gov. JB Pritzker and several legislators are demanding that, in exchange for any new operating money, management Chicago Transit Authority, Metra, Pace and the Regional Transportation Authority all be reformed. They've all operated Authority is the most wellknown villain in the transit governance debacles, but it clearly ain't alone.

because. apparently, Metra doesn't have any. Nobody at Metra would even admit to knowing who touted the property, which was owned at the time by a Metra hand sani-

Was the property brought to the agency by an independent broker? "No," Metra's CEO Jim Derwinski told his board last month. '(T)his was mostly our engineering and materials management team out looking for something available,' was Derwinski said, according to the ABC7 report. Unreal.

'Derwinski said the agency was facing potential layoffs of its workforce

[during the pandemic] and Executive Leadership Team saw the building purchase as an opportunity to repurpose employees to work on and make improvements to the warehouse," the station

Um, they have no contracts over

Metra bought the property "as-is," and has since spent another $11.1 million. But the property will require "tens of millions of dollars more to finish," and will take at least two more years, the report continued. OK, look, Harvey definitely needs investment. And I will be the first to admit that our state procurement laws are an unnecessarily complicated mess. Small businesses and non-profits simply do not have the ability to naved, which makes handing out grants an excruciating process.

But, I mean, what the heck is going on over there? Metra is throwing tens of millions of dollars at a warehouse without any sort of purchasing The process? board seemed to be surprised at how deep a hole the agency had dug itself into during its meeting last month. That's a massive failure by the board, but where the heck are the operating rules?

The thing that just completely blew my mind about the ABC7 story was Derwinski's cavalier attitude about the taxpayer money it had spent and is committed to spending in the future.

Metra was running short on operating dollars during the pandemic, Derwinski explained, so the agency "saw an opportunity to shift workforce into this building at that period of time to keep them working under capital dollars." The original purchase was made with state Rebuild Illinois bond

"The fiscal cliff is an operating dollar problem," Derwinski said.

The capital dollar side about making, taking care of the assets that we're entrusted to take care of, that's this conversation right here.

The fiscal cliff, it's real. It's big. But that really has to do with the operation."

Excuse me, but how the heck is the state government supposed to trust Metra to spend a massive operations bailout wisely when it's blowing tens of millions of capital dollars on a boondoggle with no discernable process and almost criminally lax oversight and shrugging it all off as no big deal?

This is exactly why reforms are necessary. Bust. The. Fiefdoms.

Retired WHS teacher digs up the history of a mining town

Richard Joyce has authored a book on the mining days in the coal town of Spring Valley, IL in Bureau County titled "Spring Valley is a Mining Town".

Many miners and their families from Braidwood, Coal City and surrounding towns moved to Spring Valley after the mines opened there in the mid-

În 1894 a Chicago newspaper stated that half of Spring Valley's population was fighting the other half. Their disagreements were economic, political, cultural and religious.

Joyce explains causes and consequences of these disputes as well as the reasons why they eventually faded in importance. He contends that although workers in the late 19th century lost numerous historic strikes, workers in Spring Valley were able to exercise control over certain aspects of life that were important to them in spite of the opposition of the corporation that owned the mines, started the town and tried to assert its power.

It is the story of the response and resilience of working people in the face

Joyce gathered information from old newspapers, city council and school board meeting minutes, union records, court cases, city directories, county histories, census and Ellis Island records and personal correspondence.

Wilmington School computer teacher Jeff Mison formatted the book and designed the cover. The book is available from lulu.com or from the author by emailing him at joyces90@comcast.net.

Charlie Brown

VENICE, FL—Charles "Charlie" Brown, a man of unwavering dedication and service, passed away on Friday, May 10, 2024, at his home in Venice, FL at the age of 80. Born on Oct. 5, 1943, in Joliet, Charlie was the son of Charles O. and Kathryn J. (Patch) Brown. Charlie embarked on a life filled with commitment, passion, and service. In 1964, he married Kathy Jisa, and together they built a life centered around family and community. They raised two children, Colleen, and Thomas, instilling in them the values of integrity, compassion, and hard work.

Charlie's dedication to his country was evident from a young age, as he proudly served in the United States Navy during the Cuban Missile Crisis. His service to his country was matched only by his commitment to his profession. For 28 years, Charlie served at the Illinois Bell Telephone Company, retiring as an Outside Plant Engineer. Never one to rest on his laurels, he continued his career following his retirement with Byers Engineering Co. and MFS Network Technologies, where he held various managerial and supervisory positions including Operations Manager, Engineering Supervisor and Project Manager.

In addition to his professional endeavors, Charlie was deeply involved in his community, serving in various capacities that showcased his leadership and commitment to public service. # Inside Out 2 movie an opportunity for parents to talk about kids' emotions

Anxiety, envy, nostalembarrassment and...ennui?

Four of the new emotions in the newly released Disney/Pixar movie Inside Out 2 – the latest peek inside the mind of nowteenage girl Riley – are sure to ring a bell.

But what's ennui?

A quick Google search will tell you it's just another word for boredom. But there's more to it than that, says Kyle Boerke, PsyD, a clinical child psychologist and the director of behavioral health outpatient for HealthCare.

And you can also count Dr. Boerke as a fan of the Inside Out franchise. He says the first movie and trailer for second get a lot right when it comes to kids' emotions and how parents can help.

Ennui demystified Dr. Boerke says ennui

(pronounced awn-WEE) describes an angst or listlessness-type boredom that develops in the preteenage or teenage years. It can show itself in adulthood, too, but the younger years are the prime time.

"As we learn to regulate our emotions better, you're going to see less of that emotion overtly," Dr. Boerke says. "It will still be there, but we're learning to express it better."

Children experiencing ennui may mope around the house or not be interested in things they used to, like playing with Legos.

emotions from Hollywood? Common sense says to take everything on our screens with a grain of salt and to talk to a health care provider for trusted advice. light the spark. But Dr. Boerke says parents use the Inside Out movies to teach kids about healthy behaviors. The biggest thing we can do with children from a young age is understanding and naming emotions," Dr. Boerke says. "If I can get a two, three or fouryear-old naming emotions, I have succeeded. And the first Inside Out movie did a fantastic job with that.

Some things to consider when chatting before, during or after these movies:

• There are no "bad" emotions, Dr. Boerke says. "If something sad happens, it's okay to be sad. If something frustrating happens, it's okay to feel anger," he says. "While there are no bad emotions, I can express an emotion in a bad way," he adds. "I can express happiness in a bad way by overindulging in something. Or sometimes happiness comes out as anger. I'm so excited and happy that I go and tackle my friend to the ground."

• Dr. Boerke says ennui, like other emotions, has a good middle ground. Children shouldn't be overstimulated or completely bored. But somewhere in the middle lies a silver lining: a spark of creativity. A child may, out of boredom, go outside and kick a soccer ball around, sparking curiosity in a new hobby.

Or they may call a classmate, leading to a new friendship. Dr. Boerke says sometimes it takes a mental health professional to

"Often, I don't even say things that are different than what parents say. But I'm not mom or dad. I'm not the caregiver," Dr. Boerke remarks. "It's what we call behavioral activation. Let's come up with things to do to help you become less bored."

 Don't bottle up emotions. Inside Out 2 even addresses this in a tonguein-cheek way, showing Riley's emotions from the first movie - joy, sadness, anger, fear and disgust - in a literal bottle.

"If they do it as well as I think they will, this will be a great conversation starter," Dr. Boerke says.

"An emotion, if left to its own devices, is going to come up. You're going to express it, hopefully appropriately. And it's going to go back down again," he adds. "However, if we bottle that emotion up, it's going to fester and rise until it can't be controlled. Then it comes out in an inappropriate way.'

For example, a child may continually bottle up frustration over being asked to clean their room until they trash the room. Long term, behaviors like this can impact a litany of things: the child's mental health, physical health, performance in school and relationship with peers. Plus, it strains the rest of the family.

new photo enforcement vans that will be used throughout Illinois work zones starting this construction season, a continuation of a program that traces back 20 years ago.

The vehicles are the result of a new contract with Modaxo, which allows for as-needed equipment updates and a "train the trainer" program that will put operations firmly in the hands of IDOT and Illinois State Police. Bearing clear markings designating them as speed photo enforcement vehicles, the vans feature updated technology and a large sign that displays the speed of approaching vehicles. Highway Safety Programs Unit Chief Juan Pava said the improved technological features are a boon to the program. "We are going to have lidar-based speed detection, which is a huge improvement over our previous contract that had radar speed detection," Pava said. "We have new cameras with much higher resolution, as well as new safety features within the

"The original speed photo enforcement program was based on a study we did with the University of Illinois back in 2004, which demonstrated that the speed photo enforcement units decreased speed in work zones on average by about 8 mph, which brings average speeds closer to the posted work zone speed limits,' Pava said.

ISP Capt. Bill Langheim said that he's seen the program work firsthand. "When drivers see

Dear EarthTalk: Which countries are leading the ing the transition to EVs in shift from internal combustion engine automobiles to Globally, China is leadterms of sheer numbers. But other countries are further ahead in terms of per capita shifting to EVs.

China has an EV sales share of 29 percent and an impressive number of publicly available fast-charging stations. There are 760,000 charging stations country-wide-almost six times more than all the combined charging stations in other countries! In June 2024, China unveiled a $73.65 billion package of tax breaks over four years to incentivize Chinese citizens to buy EVs and other greener cars.

Sweden has a higher share of EV sales than China (54 percent) but less publicly available charging stations (2,600). People with battery EVs in Sweden pay the least road tax and are exempt from ownership tax for five years. Norway has the highest share of EV sales (88 percent) and many publicly available charging stations (9,100).

However, the annual increase in EV sales in Norway was about 36 perfrom 2021-2022. Compare that to China (about 63 percent) and Sweden (about 68 percent).

China, Sweden and Norway are clear leaders in EV adoption, but it is also interesting to note which countries produce the most EV batteries. The supply chain for batteries starts in the mines, where raw materials containing the needed components are extracted.

These materials have be processed and refined, then made into battery cells, assembled into modules and then sold to automakers. Most EVs use lithium-ion batteries since they have a high power-to-weight ratio and long life. China holds 62.5 percent of global lithiumion manufacturing capacity, Germany 11.3 percent, and the United States 6.3 percent. Still other countries lead in EV vehicle production after batteries reach automakers. China is the top country for car production, followed by Japan and India. Some carmakers have formed partnerships with battery makers to produce their own batteries. NIO, the equivalent of Tesla in China, is one such exam-

EVs are gaining momentum in Africa, too. About two years ago, the Ethiopian government introduced incentives for Ethiopians to adopt EVs, including exemption from several kinds of taxes. People were further incentivized by increased restrictions on internal combustion imports, which are set to be banned entirely in the near future. Éthiopia originally set a goal to have 150,000 electric cars on the roads by 2030. Since 100,000 has

Wildcat state

The Wilmington High ool softball camp wrapped up last week at the varsity softball field with over 30 girls in attendance over two days.

The June 10 - 11 camp focused on improving fundamentals with fielding ground balls, working on a dropstep in the outfield and catching fly balls as well as executing routine outs when the ball is in play and how to run the bases.

It was a great two days filled with fun, camaraderie and lots of energy! A big thank you to the varsity softball players who came out to help run camp: Aly Allgood, Ashlyn Warriner, Addison Billingsley, Lexi Strohm, Sami Liaromatis and Taryn Gilbert.
